

Christine B. Whittemore is a marketing expert whose focus is to make purchasing her clients' products a natural conclusion to an informative and comfortable buying experience, while simultaneously building brand loyalty and increasing the impact of marketing investments.

She achieves these results by focusing on priorities of the female consumer and improving their buying experience, demystifying the product and expanding ways of communicating using integrated marketing tools. Her experience includes helping companies to connect with customers by whatever means the customer wishes to communicate including social media and transforming websites from static to dynamic experiences that address not just products but industry fashion trends and issues. She has found that integrating marketing efforts digitally so that all marketing is found in one place when the customer is looking empowers shoppers with confidence to believe in the choices they make, builds loyalty for both the brand and the companies who sell them and increases the impact of marketing dollars.

These are methods that Ms. Whittemore has honed over 16 years of experience with brand building in the flooring, home furnishings and apparel industries. In her consultancy, Simple Marketing Now LLC, SimpleMarketingNow.com she uses both traditional and non-traditional marketing tools and emphasizes reducing the "bling" that can both inhibit a meaningful conversation with customers and add unneeded dollars to the marketing budget.

Ms. Whittemore was most recently Director of In-Store Innovation for Wear Dated carpet fiber. There she redesigned the Wear-Dated website transforming it from a static to a social media friendly and intuitive experience. She launched The Carpetology Blog about all things carpet to drive better qualified traffic to the Wear-Dated website. She is a columnist for Floor Covering Weekly where she writes about the customer retail experience and is a prolific teacher and lecturer.

Ms. Whittemore has been active in the social media discipline since June 2006 when she launched her highly acclaimed marketing blog, Flooring the Consumer, that is dedicated to the customer retail experience, marketing to women and social media marketing. She holds a BA in Art History and an MBA in business from the Columbia Business School.

Since 1998, Christine has regularly taught and lectured on how to improve the retail experience and marketing to women. She appears yearly at the U.S. floor covering trade show Surfaces, and speaks often at industry events including Carpet One Floor and Home education sessions, Mohawk ColorCenter and Floorscape conventions, individual retailer locations and many more. Her audiences consist of industry leaders, professionals, manufacturers, retailers and salespeople in the home furnishings, floor covering and other industries.
